

Welcome to my first bi-monthly newsletter.

As a photographer, I feel it's important for me to view other artists' work and keep in touch with what's happening in the Arts world, particularly in London. As someone who has expressed an interest in my photography, I thought you might enjoy an arts bulletin of what's caught my eye in the way of exhibitions and current issues. I hope you find it interesting and please feel free to email me any feedback photos@nikigorick.com

Is photography finally coming of age in Britain?

For years, photography has been the poor relation of the British art world but June not only saw the re-launch of the purely lens-based art fair 'Photo-London' (admittedly run by the photo-enthusiastic French) but Tate Britain opened its first ever major exhibition of photography, 'How we are'. Presented in an art gallery, not in a museum, the photographs have a double impact: yes, they document the British and their changing habitat over almost two centuries but the images also chart the stylistic evolution of photography into a fully fledged art form -- one that's finally been invited inside a flagship of Britain's art establishment.

New direction in my photography:

Recently inspired by the strongly graphic work of Magnum photographer, Trent Parke, over the next few months I will be developing a series of new, cutting edge images to add to my portfolio.

"I'm exploring a new direction in my photography, driven by my fascination with the layering of time and the interaction of people and place, unique to London." Niki Gorick.
